Shipments of Lead, Zinc and Fluor Spar Much Greater Than Last Season—Mining Work Progressing Most Favorably.

AN EXTREMELY PROSPEROUS OUTLOOK.

Blue & Nunn have been shipping from their Old Jim mine very regularly. They have delivered on board cars for the Northern Smelter, during the past three or four weeks, 14 car loads of ore, two of which were Jack, the summing up being zinc carbonate, 840,000 pounds, sulphide of zinc (Jack,) 160,000 pounds. The same mine has some 160,000 pounds of carbonate ready to go forward this week. The Superintendent of this property tells the Record that he has discovered a parallel vein on the Old Jim ground some 300 yards east of the present opening with very decided indications of another "good thing."

The machinery on what is known as the nine acres, is about ready to start up. There are over 100 tons of carbonate of zinc carrying more or less galena that will be handled first through their hand jigs. Several hundred tons of very heavy mixed zinc and lead ores already on top will yield a very rich shipping concentrate which from this time on will go forward very regularly.

The Greer-Marble mining property on the Wilson land near Crittenden Springs is outputting a large quantity of a leaded carbonate ore similar in many respects to that obtained on the nine acres. Judge Gordon, who visited this property the other day, speaks very enthusiastically over the outlook for a large tonnage of high grade ore.

The President of the Marion Zinc Company says that the separating plant at their Riley mine will be in operation the latter part of next week. The quantity of Fluor Spar carrying a 7 per cent lead already out seems to be ample to keep this mill running for several months. At 130 feet depth in the Riley shaft the lead seems to grow stronger, determinations from that depth generally showing a 10 to 15 per cent lead. On the basis of handling 30 tons per day saving 5 per cent of lead and 60 per cent of fluor spar the daily cash output should be 3000 pounds of lead ore $75, 36000 pounds fluor spar at $4 per ton, $72 showing a total every 24 hours of $147.

Kay Kevil, the City Surveyor, has been engaged during the past week in determining the course of the Lucile vein, through the Reed Mining Company's property, part of which is now in the city limits. The undertaking was conducted in a very thorough scientific way. The Lucile Mine has two deep shafts. At 120 feet in the ground Mr. Kevil ran a line between the two on the ore vein. With this accomplished he ran the course which passed through the great quartzite outcrop in the Princeton road south of the Old Hickory Distillery and rather strange to say, cut through the center of the shaft established early last year by the Reed Mining Company due west of the Black house from which the sulphur was taken out for shipment. A cut of the lines run as well as the boundaries of the Reed land showing the entire property was made by Mr. Kevil and is now in the hands of the engraver for reproduction. This sketch will be published in the Marion papers probably in the next week.

The electric light plant at Golconda will be completed in comparatively a few days. The Central's incline to the river is in fair stage of progress and will be ready for use in August.

Going over one of the river's shores, the highlands covered with sage and costly residential streets, and the general prosperity make of this hamlet a most desirable home for the mining man.

A cross cut being run at 160 feet depth in the Old mine, the east wall has already been reached and considerable fluor spar, zinc and ores are being raised to the surface. It is anticipated that the depth will show an extremely heavy body of mineral.

No definite information regarding the starting the Washers on the Miller estate property of the Marion Zinc Company has been received to the time of our going to press. It is understood however that machinery is all in good shape and the moment that a supply of water is assured which it is felt will be reached in a few days.

The Kenton Zinc Spar Company has turned upon development work and several properties on a varying scale. Mining for the instant present will not only be profitable but the wants of the market will be recognized by the work accomplished thoroughly and substantially.

The possibilities of Fluor Spar across Ohio river at and near Golconda, Elizabethtown and Shetterly's other landings do not seem to be utilized anywhere near its present capacity. Indeed, many known properties are idle for some reason.

The Pittsby Mining and Manufacturing Company's separating plant, some miles from Golconda, was down last week. This property is a fair showing of dissemination and has all the paraphernalia of an extensive outfit.

The A. D. & Sons owning in fee simple 1800 acres in and adjoining developed Fluor Spar properties using but very little.

The Gilberthorpe is also quiet.

QUEER THINGS AND QUEER PEOPLE

Lee Turner, editor of the Fulton Leader, recently received a fine chicken, which he supposing it to be a token of appreciation from a discriminating reader, took it home and ate it for dinner. The following morning he received this letter: "Dear Editor: Yesterday I sent you a chicken in order to settle a dispute which has arisen here. It died with a new kind of disease. My wife thinks it had cholera while I think it had blind staggers. Please examine it and let me know what you think the trouble was."

"Speaking about people sleeping," said one of the speakers gathered around Haynes' drug store, "Roy Gilbert is the longest sleeper I ever heard of. Last summer," continued the speaker, "Roy was stopping at the Crittenden Springs hotel, and on retiring Sunday morning at 1 o'clock, he gave orders to be left alone until he awoke. Sunday afternoon inquiries were made about Roy and it was learned that he was still asleep, and so he slept until noon Monday, 36 hours." It is nothing uncommon for Roy Gilbert to sleep from 16 to 18 hours but this 36 hour nap is a record breaker.

At the opening of Marion's new postoffice, Postmaster Crider advertised that he would be there at 5 o'clock or earlier on Wednesday for the purpose of allotting first come, first clock R. F. Haynes, A. M. Hearin and Charles Moore met at Haynes' drug store and telephoned Mr. Crider to come up, that they wanted to select their boxes. About this time, Press Maxwell passed along by the drug store enroute to the postoffice to select his box. At 2:20 o'clock, it is claimed, Mr. Crider appeared at the postoffice. Messrs. Haynes, Hearin and Moore were coming to wedge the name of his fraternity and land some of the virtues and advantages over all other like organizations, then all was chaos in the minister's studio. The two organizers who had been onlookers, turned over their chairs and tumbled headlong out at an open window, the preacher fainted and the elderly "gentleman from Indiana" made his escape unhurt and took a solemn obligation to never listen to another mineral story.

The subject of organization is one of the most common topics with our people. We hear it discussed on the streets, in the business houses, around the fireside and in fact, every where in the bounds of the Grand Old Commonwealth of Crittenden county. A few days ago three "gentlemen from Indiana," were in town for the purpose of organizing a company of Modern Woodmen and while stealing around our streets seeking whom they might devour, they met one of our genial clergymen, who, by the way, is somewhat interested in our mineral wealth and would like to organize a mining company, and he, seeing the "gentlemen from Indiana," and presuming they were capitalists from a distance, accosted them and they readily fell into conversation. One of the "gentlemen from Indiana" informed the genial minister that they would like to have a "little talk" with him and he readily assented and invited them to his residence. Arriving at the clergymen's house the host served ice water and other refreshments such as pure air and palm leaf fans and then began to explain his plan for organization. Two of the "gentlemen from Indiana" busied themselves with an inspection of the minister's library, reading a newspaper and examining geological specimens while the elderly gentleman listened patiently, sometimes impatiently, to a graphic description of our mineral wealth and finally, the "gentleman from Indiana" found a gap in the clergymen's eloquence sufficient to

Valuable Animal.

Mrs. Mary E. Giles, of near Howell, is the owner of a Jersey cow which, it is said produces nine gallons of milk per day. The accumulation of lactic fluid is so rapid that it has become necessary to milk her three times a day. The large quantity of milk does not include that which is consumed by the calf, which is permitted to lunch at intervals during the day. Hopkinsville Kentuckian.

The Test of Greatness.

Campaign buttons and complimentary newspaper notices are all right, but some people will not believe fame has really struck the man from Indiana until they see the 5-cent cigar.

The History of Babbitt Metal.

An erroneous idea appears to prevail in regard to the invention of babbitt metal, says the Metal Industry. Although Isaac Babbitt was the inventor of the method of using soft metals in journal boxes, his patent specifications make no claim on the alloy itself, but simply on the method of holding the soft metal in place.

Isaac Babbitt was born in Taunton, Massachusetts, on July 26, 1779. He learned the trade of goldsmith, and in 1824, in his native town, made the first britannia ware produced in the United States but this enterprise proved unsuccessful. He then removed to Boston and entered the employ of the South Boston Iron Works, and in 1839, while an employee of this establishment, he produced the invention which has perpetuated his name. For this invention he was given a gold medal from the Massachusetts Charitable Mechanics' Association, and afterward Congress granted him the sum of $20,000 as a reward. In 1844 the invention was patented in England and in 1847 in Russia. After devoting some time to the production of metals he engaged in the manufacture of soap, so that his name has become almost a household word. He died insane at the McLane Asylum, Somerville, Massachusetts, on May 26, 1862.

The fact that in the patent specification no claim is made for the alloy is sufficient to dispel the ordinary belief in this direction. Britannia metal, pewter, or an alloy of tin, 50 parts; antimony, 5 parts, and copper 1 part are recommended. The latter alloy is somewhat softer than that now known as "genuine babbitt," which is commonly composed of tin, 96 parts; antimony, 8 parts, and copper, 4 parts. The original idea in the use of a soft metal was practically the same as it is now—i. e., to make a bearing which would conform to the surface of the axle. It is natural, then, that the alloys used today are somewhat harder than the original material employed. It is also natural that the same Isaac Babbitt should have been handed down to posterity as the inventor of the alloy, although, of course, quite erroneously.—Power and Transmission.

"What's the Use?"

Eight years ago FREDERICK T. DUNOIS, of Idaho, nobly bolted in silver's cause from the Republican convention at St. Louis. Four years ago he helped manage the silver Republican convention at Kansas City just as eagerly as though he were running the three-ring circus instead of the little side show. Now he has been a delegate to the Democratic convention at St. Louis.

But his heart is heavy as he looks around him and reflects upon the kind of a Democratic platform he will be called upon to support.

"Back among the gold-bugs," he murmurs. "I might as well have remained a Republican as to land like this in a gold Democratic convention. What's the use?"

Mr. Dubois should not be down-hearted. Let him reflect on all the things Democracy has done for him. If he had remained a Republican he would have been an imperialist. Now he can rejoice as an "anti." If he had remained a Republican he would have been a supporter of the awful crime against Colombia, but as it is he was able to vote against the Panama Canal. His whole stock of convictions, first principles and "foundations of our liberties," would have been different from what they are today.

Moreover, he is safely fixed in his chair in the United States Senate, where he forms one-nineteenth of the "greatest deliberative assembly on earth." Outrageous fortune has no slings that can harm the HON. FREDERICK T. DUNOIS.

Good Selling Points.

An exchange says the Japanese soldier has muscles like whipcord, is a sure shot, has a good eye for landmarks, sleeps only three hours out of the twenty-four, is cleanly and patriotic and costs the nation only 9 cents a day. Sounds as if some big department store had just received a choice lot of Japanese soldiers and was bound to have a run on them.—Buffalo Express.

Despondency.

I seek the humble cottage in the lane
And boldly enter through the cas-

I haunt the lowly and harass the great;

I loiter in the city, cross the plain,
Pursue the mariner upon the main
And to the hermit's hovel penetrate;

Where peace prevails and where wars devastate

I pitch my tent, or pass with cool disdain,

I knock and am straightway let

Or funeral or where fond love-

I make the soldier bow his head;

The poet and the sage admit me, I Am flouted only by the fool, whose

SALUTATION.

There's much in a beginning. It takes more resolution to do than it does to say anything. Enterprise after enterprise makes a graceful bow to the public and then begins its career, but it's not the bow that brings success, but the business sagacity and purpose of those who foster the enterprise. The newspaper has long been recognized as a public benefactor. That which benefits the public must be conducted in a business-like, public-spirited way. So, then, as we lead you to and through our columns, we make our bow and say to you that we mean business. We mean to treat you fairly. The position of an editor is a peculiar and often a trying one. We cannot please all, and our endeavor shall be to please the most of the folks and at the same time do the right thing.

It is in order to state further that we are not in business for fun, else we would not have put into the enterprise the capital we have. Let us give you a peep into our plant and you may draw your conclusions. We have just purchased and put in one of the best, most modern, and best equipped newspaper and job outfits in Western Kentucky. This has not been accomplished without a considerable outlay of money. You may go and examine any $3,000 outfit you may wish, then come see THE CRITTENDEN RECORD outfit, and we are certain that you will have a better idea of the cost of newspaper plants and can better appreciate the amount of money we have spent in equipping the RECORD office, and we will here go farther and say that you are not likely to find a $3,000 plant that will surpass this one. THE RECORD plant is now far superior to any in this section. Our facilities for publishing a good paper and for turning out a superior grade of fine job work are unexcelled.

THE RECORD will be printed to give the local news of Livingston county as well as Crittenden.

When an enterprise is begun, people often ask, "Will it live? This is a legitimate question. More or less friendly criticism must any enterprise encounter. But will the RECORD live? That depends upon whom? As above we have given some idea of our investment, so then in order to answer the question we must state that it has come to stay. And if the support which it ought to have will come to it, we think no one will doubt its staying qualities. Every enterprise worthy the name has its doubtful period, but only the confirmed pessimist is eternally predicting failure. Failure is the biggest word in his vocabulary, but given a reasonable patronage that word will be a stranger to our sanctum. Nor are we proclaiming on the housetop what we are going to do, but we wish to verify these statements to you by having you as a constant reader of the RECORD.

The politics of the RECORD is Republican—the party of Lincoln, manfield, McKinley and Roosevelt, five remarkable career of the Reighan party, the principles for which it has contended make it an honor as well as a pleasant duty to serve in its ranks. Its great achievements need not be enumerated here, history's pages are bright with them.

Now, as to the policy of the RECORD. Progressiveness is not a lost art. It is more alive in this than any other century. Move on or die is a dictum a relentless fate has said to all enterprises. That which is for the betterment of our towns and counties, we are for it, be it in a religious, educational, political or material way. The voice of the Old century to the New was "upward." With your support "progress" shall be our watchword.

Thanking you in advance for your support, I am

Very truly,
JAS. E. CHITTENDEN.

It was a great megaphone convention.

Is it not time for Port Arthur to fall some more?

It goes without saying that the postmaster at Esopus, N. Y., will have a rush.

Now that old Miss Democracy has straddled the Golden Calf and promises to be good under the wise counsel of August Belmont & Co., we await with interest an editorial from the pen of Henry Watterson on the "warp and woof" order.

The address of Baron Sternberg, of the German Legation at Washington at a recent College Commencement, was most apropos. His advice to the young men of the country, "Go South," indicates that Baron Sternberg knows exactly what he is talking about. There's no section of America that offers such facilities for advancement in a financial and social way as the South of today.

A marked advance has been taken toward Christian unity by the Methodist Episcopal Church in a more reverent observance of the ancient Christian landmarks. The saying of the belief of Apostles' Creed at all services together with the chanting of the Gloria Patria and the reverent and devout worship which such acts inspire indicates a return to the former usages of the church which at one time had nearly as ornate a ritual of public worship as that of the Episcopal Church of today.

The "Lucky Five" Thos. Cochran, Al Pickens, C. E. Weldon, John T. Pickens and John G. Asher have formed an association to mine the 54 acres of what is known as the Blake Terry place near Glendale, the consideration being $2000. This property was obtained from Jim Sullinger, who, a few weeks ago, paid $500 for the mineral rights on the same property. The work of the "Lucky Five" has already uncovered the LaRue vein which passes through this land. Mr. Weldon has some very handsome specimens of Fluor Spar and Zinc from the initial shaft.

When the chairman of the Iowa delegation cast the 26 votes for Hearst one wild red-whiskered delegate climbed a seat and yelled that he belonged to the "unbought variety" and announced that he cast his vote for Parker. He was promptly pulled down and put under a seat and told that if he did not keep quiet his face would be fixed. This did not suit Chairman Clark and he ordered him to the platform where he announced his views. When he went back to his seat his delegation would not allow him to sit with them and he had to take a seat elsewhere.

The CRITTENDEN RECORD fully believes that the future of our mining industry will not only keep pace with the past, but that month by month the outputting of merchantable ores will increase in a greater ratio, will devote whatever space may be necessary to give full, clear and dependable reports of the progress made throughout the district. The section of country lying between Henderson and Nunn's Switch, one of the strongest coal fields in Kentucky, will also have proper care and attention bestowed its mining and development work. There are at present some forty incorporated mining companies at work in this and the coal fields adjacent. The shipments made are attracting the attention of older districts and a considerable influx of miners and investors are making their appearance.

Good business men they are if money making is a criterion, well to do, intelligent apparently, looked up to by their less fortunate brothers for advice and counsel, they perhaps are not aware that they are doing more to create a desert out of a blossoming garden than nature could do with her wildest cyclones and floods.

THE CONVENTION

That Nominated Alton B. Parker For President.

The national Democratic convention which met July 6, adjourned at 1:21 p. m. Saturday after having nominated candidates for President and Vice President. Before the meeting Judge Parker and W. R. Hearst had the greatest number of instructed votes. The convention was a stormy one and with all the beautiful talk about harmony there was much oratory and the uncertainty of who was to be the nominee kept the delegates in a tense state. Hill, of New York, had his following and his candidate, Bryan, the "peerless leader" of two disastrous campaigns, had his followers. The platform is a compromise to right the contending factions. It declares that the money question is not an issue, therefore it is silent on finances which is over much pleasing to Hill because Parker is a gold standard man. It was the only alternative for Bryan although it was a bad dose as the straws in the wind ominously pointed away from "free silver."

Judge Alton Brooks Parker was nominated on the first ballot after some western states had changed their votes. The convention then proceeded to select a Vice-presidential candidate. Of the names presented, Williams, Davis, Turner and Harris, Davis of West Virginia, proved the fortunate one.

The silence of the platform on the money question by no means eliminates this question as an issue. The resolution committed left a money plank out but candidate Parker inserts it in his telegram to the convention when he says: "I regard the gold standard as firmly and irrevocably established and shall act accordingly if the action of the convention of today shall be ratified by the people."

Fissure veins like dikes are formed by the filling of great fissures and hence extend along the country for considerable distances and also extend into the earth, to great and unknown depths. They may be very wide, and like dikes, frequently occur in parallel systems. Very often a vein consists of a decomposed dike of some eruptive rock which is highly impregnated with mineral, the impregnation taking place most strongly at the contact between the dike and the country rock.

"By their fruits ye shall know them" is true today although twenty centuries have elapsed since its utterance. As true regarding material affairs as spiritual. "Can any good come out of Nazareth?" was answered by the appearance of the one perfect man. The scoffers and the tale bearers and the falsifiers were quite as prevalent in Judea as today in this beautiful portion of our grand old Commonwealth of Kentucky.

It must be a natural heritage, an inborn desire to tear down rather than build up that causes men to decry all public improvements as well as business enterprises. Jay Gould was considered a wrecker and his touch seemed to wither the strongest financial institutions and a receiver followed his investments or apparent investments almost as a matter of course.

Here, in one of the most picturesque, the most productive counties of a state that is known from land's end to land's end, we also have our Jay Goulds whose touch seems to leave bruises rather than healing. The exodus of scores of our citizens to the Indian Territory, Kansas, Washington and Colorado are some of the fruits of their pessimistic utterances.

Good business men they are if money making is a criterion, well to do, intelligent apparently, looked up to by their less fortunate brothers for advice and counsel, they perhaps are not aware that they are doing more to create a desert out of a blossoming garden than nature could do with her wildest cyclones and floods.

NUMBER THIRTEEN

As Given in American History, Not Considered Unlucky.

Queen Victoria once asked Ambassador Choate if Americans believed 13 to be an unlucky number.

"No, Your Majesty," he replied, "we do not, for the eternal foundations of our republic were built upon the number 13."

Let us see what Mr. Choate referred to. In the first place America was discovered on the eve of the 13th day of the month, and the original republic consisted of 13 colonies. The first official stars and stripes adopted June 14, 1777, had 13 stripes and 13 stars. Our national emblem—the American eagle, requires 13 letters to spell it, as does the motto on our seal—"E. Pluribus Unum," and of the great seal of the U. S., Annuit Coeptis."

The first word to pass over the Atlantic cable was sent on the 13th day of the month, and on Friday at that. The silver quarter in your purse is not considered a "hoodoo" yet 13 is written all over it. Above the head of Liberty are 13 stars, the eagle bears an olive branch with 13 leaves in one claw and 13 thunderbolts in the other. On his breast is a shield bearing 13 bars, and from his beak streams a ribbon with our motto containing 13 letters. Each wing has 13 feathers while as you know it takes 13 letters to spell quarter dollar.

The war of 1776 was called revolutionary and was not unsuccessful because spelled with 13 letters. Our flag was saluted by 13 guns when Washington raised it—yes, and by 13 cheers. The American navy had just 13 vessels at the outset—no more, and the founder of it—John Paul Jones—was not unlucky because of the letters in his name. He was exactly 13 years old when he first came to America, and was the first to carry the 13-starred flag to glory and victory and to have it saluted by a foreign power on the 13th day of the month. Perry's great victory on Lake Erie was won on the 13th day of the month, and the Stars and Stripes raised over Sumpter on the 13th.

It would seem that the evil omens attached to the number 13 merely hint at the retribution which overtakes those who profane that which is essentially sacred.

Rev. Minot J. Savage in a sermon on "Superstitions," declares that he never found 13 unlucky except on one occasion when he owed a bill for 13 dollars and had but 12 with which to meet it.

We all know that rooms in hotels, staterooms and sleepers bearing the number 13 are not taken from choice by the average person. A traveling man arriving late at a hotel was assigned to room 13. "No, you don't," said he, "I'll sleep on the billiard table or office floor first." The clerk with a merry twinkle sent him to 94 and the guest failed to add the figures together.

"My wife is worrying about there being 13 at the table tonight," said a host. "Superstitions, eh?" replied the guest. "No, but she has only one dozen best forks."

In the life of Richard Wagner 13 played a part. He was born in 1813, the numerals of which added make 13. He finished "Tannhäuser" April 13, 1860, and it was performed for the first time March 13, 1861. He died February 13, 1883—a most unlucky thing for the world at large.

Thirteen is repeated in a singular way in the case of a man named George Coates (13 letters here) who moved from Vermont to Minnesota and lived there until June 13, 1898, when he joined the 13th Minnesota Regiment, Co. M.—the thirteenth letter in the alphabet. He was the thirteenth child in his family. He took part in the Manila land fight Aug. 13th and died soon after, but not on Friday or on the 13th day of the month. To the unbeliever this would be put down to a chain of coincidences, but to those who have faith in omens it affords added proof of their tenets.

Twenty years ago in New York City the Thirteen Club was formed and is still in existence. Their first home was at a club, Knickerbocker, spelled with 13 letters and located at 454 Sixth Avenue, a number which added together fits all right with their ideas. It is a unique organization and has excited curiosity from the start, although at first ridiculed. The first achievement in carrying out its objects—to disabuse the public mind about 13—was to petition the states to abolish Friday as "Hangman's Day." New York led off with the execution of Mrs. Druse on Monday. This unpleasant task is now performed in many states on other days than Friday and Sunday, and as a result of the pioneer work of this club.

At its first club dinner 13 sat down and all survived the year. No one died for six years, and it was neither food nor drink that caused his taking off. When the club dines they cross forks, break a mirror and spill salt regardless. The membership is limited to 1300 and was reached in 1889. The initiation fee is $1.13, and they address each other as "Yours Thirteen."—Marion Howard.

The Doctors Agreed.

The Medical profession is often ridiculed by the ignorant layman, and many stale jokes are told over and over again about doctors disagreeing and neither of the consulting physicians knowing what to do or when to do it. But doctors do not always disagree. A short time ago, three doctors were consulting in the case of a wealthy patient and after deciding on the plan of treatment, they agreed to charge a consultation fee of fifty dollars each.

They returned to the sick chamber and informed their patient that they had reached their conclusions by thoroughly investigating and discussing his case and that the attending physician would direct the treatment of the case and they would hold another consultation in the morning. The patient looked the three over and asked what their fees would be. The attending physician informed him that they had agreed to charge a consultation fee of fifty dollars each. The patient murmured, "The doctors have agreed. I must recover."

From Queen to President.

Dr. A. E. Winship, of Boston, editor of the "Journal of Education," in his lecture on "Twentieth Century Standards" shows that improvement in private conveyance is as great as in public travel.

Queen Elizabeth, in her regal splendor and luxury of personal life, with all her royal equipage, had no coach or carriage more comfortable than a modern hay rack, so far as easing the jolt was concerned. Even George Washington and John Adams, with their many luxuries, had nothing easier than the cumbersome sole-leather "thorough brace," which simply changed the bounce, lending variety, without adding comfort unless the people were weighed and balanced skillfully. John Hancock, the wealthy Governor of Massachusetts, whose gorgeous penmanship is the pride of the Declaration of Independence, had a famous lawsuit in connection with his wedding journey because of the discomfort and danger attending a trip on the best stage line in America. Daniel Webster, lover of good horses and proud of his establishment, never owned a steel-spring carriage; and even Benjamin Harrison never enjoyed a pneumatic tire; while President Eliot, of Harvard, rides the streets of classic Cambridge on an up-to-date bicycle, so simple, so easy, and comfortable that miles do not signify and discomfort is out of mind. What would Queen Elizabeth, Washington, Webster, and Horace Greeley think if they could peek through the curtains of Eternity and see the president of the Y. P. S. C. E. and other ecclesiastical and educational dignitaries, flying through the streets on a modern bicycle?

No man can love his neighbor as himself if the aforesaid neighbor is learning to play a cornet.

"NEELY" VANDERBILT

An Enterprising Young Man Who is Self-Made.

Self-reliant young Cornelius Vanderbilt is carving out a career for himself in which the family millions play only an incidental part. Up to the time that he was stricken with typhoid fever a little more than a year ago, he had shown qualities that caused the graybeards of finance to exclaim: "That boy has got the original Vanderbilt grit in him. He is made of the same stuff as the old commodore." There is no more unassuming person in the metropolis than Cornelius Vanderbilt, but his determination knows no limit. After his father's death he found himself practically a family outcast. He was snubbed right and left by even the subordinate officers of the Vanderbilt railroads. He had previously, in mechanic's garb, learned the trade of locomotive building. His course of engineering and mechanics in Yale College was of great help to him, and during his father's lifetime this ambitious young man established headquarters in the Grand Central Station and designed a locomotive. When it became known that the eldest son of the head of the house of Vanderbilts had been cut off with a paltry million, while his younger brother received $45,000,000, the bulk of the fortune of this branch of the family, there was much wonderment as to what "Neely" would do.

"Mr. Depew, I will not abide by the terms of the will," said Cornelius, calmly, a day or two after his father's funeral. "Of course I know that my marriage displeased my father, but I have done no wrong, and my duty to my wife and child compels me to insist upon my right to share in my father's estate."

"What do you want?" asked Mr. Depew, kindly, for he had always liked "Neely."

"Alfred is welcome to the larger share and to the headship of the family," replied Cornelius. "But I want at least as much as the portions allotted to the younger children. I feel that I am entitled to such recognition."

It is a matter of public information that Mr. Depew, acting for the executors of Cornelius Vanderbilt, deceased, at once summoned Alfred home from a half finished trip around the world. Without any public discussion or scandal young Cornelius' wishes were complied with, and he received from Alfred enough to make his share of his father's estate about $8,500,000. Then the modest mechanic and designer went back to his draughting board, only to be told that the office space occupied by his table and chair was needed for other purposes. He moved from one office to another under constant prodding, and finally in sheer disgust retired from the Grand Central station and established an independent office in lower Broadway. His patents for a fire box, which practically revolutionized the freight locomotive, were commented on favorably by experts, but the New York Central directors gave the cold shoulder to the young inventor for nearly a year. It was not until young Cornelius announced his intention of building a locomotive at his own expense that the board ordered the construction of a trial machine in the company's shops. Now seven or eight of the principal railroad systems in this country are using the Vanderbilt locomotives.

As a national guardsman, a civil service commissioner and a delegate to a Republican convention, Cornelius Vanderbilt has manifested his patriotic interest in the vital affairs of citizenship. His business interests are steadily broadening. While still maintaining his extensive mechanical designing headquarters, young Vanderbilt has taken up railroad, banking, insurance and manufacturing interests with signal success. He is an influential factor in every board of directors in which he sits, not because his name is Vanderbilt, but because he is a clear-headed and brainy man with a positive genius for business.

FROM THE NATIONAL ONION

A Layer That Reveals Something of the Predominating Spirit of the Germans.

The Value of Filters
By DR. A. R. REYNOLDS,
Commissioner of Health, Chicago.

Each nation has its own set of preconceptions. We must take them altogether, or not at all. They are as compact and natural a growth as the eccentric layers of an onion, writes Samuel M. Crothers, in Atlantic. Here is a sentence from Max Muller's autobiography, thrown out quite incidentally. He has been telling how strange it seemed, when first coming to Oxford, to find that the students got along without dueling. Fighting with swords seemed to him the normal method of developing manliness, though he adds that in the German university "pistol duels are generally preferred by theological students because they cannot easily get a living if the face is scarred all over."

This remark must be taken as one would take a slice of the national onion. One assumption fits into another. To an Englishman or American there is an incongruity that approaches the grotesque—because our prejudices are different. It all becomes a matter of fact statement when we make the proper assumptions in regard to dueling in general and theological students in particular. Assuming that it is necessary for theological students to fight duels, and that the congregations are prejudiced against ministers whose faces have been slashed by swords, what is left for the poor theologists but pistols? Their method may seem more dangerous than that adopted by laymen, but Max Muller explains that the danger is chiefly to the seconds.

HIGHLAND PREACHER'S TEXT.

During the crofter disturbances in Skye a British gunboat was sent up to Portree, having on board, among other people, the sheriff of Inverness-shire, Mr. Ivory. A clergyman who sympathized with the crofters took for his text on the following Sunday the words from Kings 10:22: "Once in three years came the navy of Tarshish, bringing ivory and apes and peacocks."

There are two classes of filters on the market—the unglazed porcelain or stone, and the small filtering arrangement consisting of a tube containing charcoal or sand, which is placed upon the tap. Of these the stone or porcelain are the only ones that are of value, and these only if properly attended to. During the first few hours the filter is used the bacteria, being so small, pass through the pores of the filter. These pores finally become clogged with bacteria. Then, after a number of hours, depending upon the pressure, the water will be free from bacteria; but after a day or so the bacteria grow through the filter and there is again the contamination of the water. Therefore, the first water coming from the filter should be rejected and the filter should be boiled and thoroughly cleaned every two or three days.

The common filters that are placed upon the tap or faucet are not only worthless, but are actually harmful, because they do not stop any of the bacteria—only the organic matter, such as vegetable and animal detritus. Now, when the water is shut off a few bacteria remaining upon this animal matter find it to be a suitable food and as a result they increase enormously in numbers, so that the next water that is drawn through filter washes them out and the longer the filter is used the more bacteria are found in the water. The water may actually be three or four times as bad after it passes through such a filter as it was before it entered.

From this it can readily be seen that even the best filters are worthless unless properly cared for.

Courted, Wooed, Married, Separated
All Within Thirty-Six Hours

Courted, wooed, married and separated, all within thirty-six hours, such is the romance experienced by pretty Edna M. Mosier, one of the brightest and most vivacious school girls of Cortland, New York, and Warren H. Jarvis, of Ithaca, also of the Empire State. The principal actors in this recent romance are now separated and estranged, and will go on record, fearing no duplication of their folly by my loving couple the wide world over.

According to current report the romantic incident which prompted the young girl to take such an important step in life without more forethought, was her great desire to see the celebrated regatta at Ithaca, in which she had longed to be present, but was prevented by her mother, who continually refused permission to her daughter to view the aquatic sport.

As the story is reported, the married couple met for the first time but five weeks ago, but at that time love was far distant from their thoughts. The day before the races, however, so it is said, Jarvis encountered the pretty school girl by chance while on her way from school, and by mutual agreement took a long walk, during which Jarvis gave expression of his love, which had just sprung into the girl likewise furnishing evidence for her affection for him.

When they left each other at 6 o'clock that same evening, it was agreed that they should meet again at 7:30 on the Normal School grounds. The appointment was kept, and in the shadow of the walls of the school buildings they made the plans for their marriage. After an hour they went to the home of the Rev. David W. Keppler, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Cortland, N. Y., who performed the marriage ceremony. After marriage they took a train to Ithaca.

The next day, the races over, the young married couple began to realize their true position, being without means to provide for themselves. It was at this time that they must acquaint their respective parents with the fact of their marriage, although they had been together less than twenty-four hours. In the time they took their first walk, arranged for the marriage, and were united in wedlock.

They thereupon made known to Jarvis' parents, who reside in Ithaca, the fact that they had entered the matrimonial arena and are now husband and wife, to remain together through life inseparably.

A scene ensued which frightened the young couple and gave them an idea of what encouragement they could expect from their parents.

Within a short time two greatly distressed and sorrowing mothers, the bride's mother having been apprised of the marriage, and hastening to Ithaca, were taking part in a heated conference, resulting early the next morning in both appearing in court, when articles were signed annulling the marriage. Thus about thirty-six hours after marriage the legal separation took place.

The two young people are now sundered, although their love for each other is unabated, as is evidenced by the following letter received a few days ago by Edna from Jarvis:

My Dear, Dear Edna:
Oh, Edna, my heart is broken; think that we have been parted, when we were so happy together. I haven't slept much since, thinking of you all hours of the day and night. You don't know much I love you. Oh, if I could only see your dear, sweet face again. Edna, do you love me yet? You think of me? Remember how happy we were.

I hope you will never forget me. I am thinking of you all the

THE SUNDAY BIBLE SCHOOL.

Lesson in the International Series for July 17, 1904—"Asa's Good Reign."

(Prepared by the "Highway and By-way" Preacher.)

(Copyright, 1904, by J. M. Edson.)

LESSON TEXT.

(2 Chron. 14:1-12; Memory Verses, 2-5.)

1. So Abijah slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city of David; and Asa his son reigned in his stead. In his days the land was quiet ten years.

2. And Asa did that which was good and right in the eyes of the Lord his God;

3. For he took away the altars of the strange gods, and the high places, and brake down the images, and cut down the groves;

4. And commanded Judah to seek the Lord God of their fathers, and to do the law and the commandment.

5. Also he took away out of all the cities of Judah the high places and the images; and the kingdom was quiet before him.

6. And he built fenced cities in Judah; for the land had rest, and he had no war in those years; because the Lord had given him rest.

7. Therefore he said unto Judah, Let us build these cities, and make about them walls, and towers, gates, and bars, while the land is yet before us; because we have sought the Lord our God, we have sought Him, and He hath given us rest on every side. So they built and prospered.

8. And Asa had an army of men that bare targets and spears, out of Judah three hundred thousand; and out of Benjamin, that bare shields and drew bows, two hundred and fourscore thousands; all these were mighty men of valor.

9. And there came out against them Zerah the Ethiopian with an host of a thousand thousand, and three hundred chariots; and came unto Maresah.

10. Then Asa went out against him, and they set the battle in array in the valley of Zephathah at Maresah.

11. And Asa cried unto the Lord his God, and said, Lord, it is nothing with Thee to help, whether with many, or with them that have no power; help us, O Lord, our God; for we rest on Thee, and in Thy name we go against this multitude. O Lord, Thou art our God; let no man prevail against Thee.

12. So the Lord smote the Ethiopians before Asa, and before Judah; and the Ethiopians fled.

THE LESSON includes 2 Chron. chapters 14, 15 and 16, and 1 Kings 15:9-24.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Help us, O Lord our God; for we rest on Thee."—2 Chron. 14:11.

TIME.—Beginning of Asa's reign, 932 B. C. to 914 B. C. The battle with Zerah was probably in Asa's fourteenth year.

PLACE.—Jerusalem, where Asa reigned. The place where Zerah, the invader, was defeated was 25 miles southwest of Jerusalem.

PEOPLE.—Asa, the king; Zerah, the Ethiopian invader.

Events in Judah During Asa's Reign.

Prophet Azariah encourages the king.—2 Chron. 15:1-7.

Asa puts away idolatry.—2 Chron. 16:7-14.

Asa's unholy league with Syria.—2 Chron. 16:1-6.

Prophet Eliajan's Rebuke and end of Asa's reign.—2 Chron. 16:7-14.

Events in Israel During Asa's Reign.

Death of Jereboam and reign of his son, Nadab (two years).—1 Kings 14:20, and 15:22. Death of Jereboam II in second year of Asa's reign.

Baasha's conspiracy and reign, and murder of all of Jereboam's house.—1 Kings 15:27 to 16:5.

Death of Baasha and two years' reign of his son Elijah.—1 Kings 16:6-8.

Assassination of Elijah and all Baasha's house by Zimri in twenty-seventh year of Asa's reign, and seven days' reign of Zimri.—1 Kings 16:9-15.

Omri chosen king. He destroys his rivals Zimri and Tibni.—1 Kings 16:16-28.

Death of Omri and beginning of Ahab's reign in thirty-eighth year of Asa's reign.

Comparing Scripture with Scripture.

"Asa did...good and right in the eyes of the Lord."—Here is the test of all conduct. How does it appear to God? Is it in harmony with His Word? Will it meet His approval?—Luke 16:15.

"Took away the altars...broke down the images and cut down the groves."—The evils of the reigns of Solomon and Rehoboam (see 1 Kings 11:1-8 and 14:22-24) confronted Asa, and nothing but the deepest conviction and strongest will would have ever dared attempt such reformation. But a clean heart and right purpose give heroic spirit and firm will.—Phil. 4:13; Eph. 6:10. Desperate diseases require heroic remedies. The only thing to do with sin, whether national or individual, is to put it away.—2 Cor. 6:17.

"Commanded Judah to seek the Lord."—This is the way of all real blessing and prosperity. There is close and striking connection between this verse and the statement in verse 8: "So they built and prospered." Here is cause and effect.—Prov. 14:34; Psalms 33:12. There are many promises to the seeker after God.—Matt. 7:7-8; Matt. 6:23; Heb. 11:6.

"To do the law."—But there was more to Asa's reform than froth and fireworks. The test of its genuineness was in the doing. Seeking the Lord issued in doing for the Lord. So the test of our religion is in the doing.—Matt. 7:21; John 14:15.

"There came out against them."—But the testing time came.—Heb. 12:6; Jas. 1:24.

"Asa cried unto the Lord."—Our extremity is God's opportunity.—2 Cor. 12:9; Rom. 8:24.

Elements in Asa's Prayer.—(1) Confidence in God. "It is nothing with Thee," etc. (2) Appeal to God, "Help us, O God." (3) Submission to God, "We rest on Thee." (4) Identification with God, "In Thy name we go against this multitude; let no man prevail against Thee."

"So the Lord smote."—When victory came Asa did not claim the glory and credit thereof.—Ps. 34:2.

The question never should be, how many men have we on our side, but whether we have God as our ally.

Seed Thoughts.

There are altars to-day that need breaking down—altars erected to selfishness, pleasure, ambition, etc., and upon which self is being sacrificed to all that is good and true and eternal.

The Lord sought is the Lord found, for, as Paul said to the Athenians, God is "not far from every one of us."

A strong, fearless leader always finds "mighty men of valor" to rally round him.

Asa's cause was God's cause, and where one in God's fear and genuine faith identifies himself with God, he can never fail.
